Mr. Reiner said that Mr. Markowski asserted that he had sexual relations with four other men since learning he carried the virus of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. None of those men has been located, the district attorney said.

According to the American Red Cross, it is extremely care for AIDS-infected blood to pass undetected through the screening process. A Red Cross spokesman in Washington, Terry Gautier, said that on two casions blood testing positive for the AIDS virus had escaped detection.

Since the blood screening program was instituted nation-wide in the spring of 1985, 24 million units of blood have been screened, she said. While the tests detect antibodies to the virus, newly infected people do not develop antibodies for weeks or months. Ms. Gautier noted that in this window period it is possible for infected blood to bypass the screening process. Doctors who examined Mr.

One reason the crew of the U.S. frigate Stark failed to detect an incoming traci Exocet missile that killed 37 men May 17 was that the audible alarm on the electronic tracking device had been turned off, apparently because somebody found its electrunic beeps irritating.

"It seems," says The New York Times, "that human failures aboard the $300 million high-tech warship played a much larger role than equipment malfunctions." Indeed, much sophisticated electronic weaponry has become too complex for soldiers and sailors to operate and maintain properly.

The Stark incident has quickened efforts by all three armed services to make weapons "userfriendly." It may take awhile. The Stinger anti-aircraft missile, though highly electronic, requires the operator to take 18 steps before he can fire.

For the past two years the army has followed a specific poficy of requiring manufacturers to build simplified operation and maintenance into their products. The air force and navy have simiar programs.

"Our policy gow," says Colonel Jack A. Pellicci of the army, "is to equip the soldier rather than to man the equipment." But "we have only been at it for two years and it will take another eight years to get this concept totally institutionalized."

Mr. Meese set up the financial arrangement in 1985 after he became attorney general to avoid potential conflicts of interest. He hired as the manager of the partnership W. Franklyn Chinn, who was working for Wedtech and who subsequently sat on the company's board of directors.

Mr. Meese has acknowledged in-terceding on Wedtech's behalf in 1982 when he was the White House counselor as the New York defense contractor campaigned for a $32 million U.S. Army contract for small engines on which there was no bidding. The majority coalition in the National Assembly unanimously approved legislation calling off the state of emergency. The legislation said President Eric Arturo Delvalle "needs to be able to repudiate" charges by foreign critics.

The bill was approved 39-0 with six majority members and all 22 opposition deputies absent. It said the protests that led to the state of emergency decree had ended, and it urged Panamanians to refrain from further violence.

The resolution also called for the expulsion of the U.S. ambassador, Arthur Davis.

On Monday, Mr. Abadia summoned Mr. Davis to discuss what he termed the U.S. Senate's "intolerable and offensive meddling" in Panama's internal affairs.

Starting today. Satellite delivery of Japan's leading economic daily.

In today's global economy, financial and economic developments in Tokyo can have an immediate effect on business in Frankfurt and London.

The Nihon Keizai Shimbun can help you keep informed of those changes as soon as they happen. It's been Japan's leading economic daily for over 110 years. Has a circulation of over 2.5 million. And is now available (in Japanese) in Europe at the same moment it's published in Japan.

Simultaneous printing is just the latest step in Nikkei's* growing range of worldwide economic news services in both English and Japanese.

They include publications like The Japan Economic Journal, a comprehensive weekly survey of Japanese business and finance. And a variety of online computer services that give you direct access to economic and financial news from Japan.

With chief editorial offices in Tokyo, New York and London, Nikkei is strategically positioned to help you stay a step ahead of the competition.

Suddenly in Seoul

The People's Will

For weeks South Korea appeared to be larching toward civil war. Now, suddenly, it verges on peaceful, democratic revolution. Roh Tae Woo, designated successor to President Chun Doo Hwan, opened the door by endorsing the principal opposition demand for direct presidential elections. The ruling party quickly rallied behind its candidate's bold stand. It is now up to President Chun to carry out the pledge fully and fairly, opposition leaders to respond constructively and the military to stay out of politics.

The Reagan administration, although tardy and often ambivalent about pressing reforms on Mr. Chun, deserves high marks for its behind-the-scenes diplomacy. But above all, the Korean people and leaders will merit the highest praise if they can conclude their conflicts in the voting booths.

Kim Young Sam, leader of the main opposition party, and Kim Dae Jung, his more militant rival, have bailed the Rob proposals. But Kim Dae Jung also seems tempted to raise new demands, such as immediate transfer of authority to a new transition government. Radical students, a continuing force in South Korean politics, remain to be heard.

Nor can the armed forces be discounted.

They have aborted every democratic experiment in modern Korean history. A new military intervention could mean bloody civil war, loss of the 1988 Olympics and a serious deterioration in relations with America. Presumably, the Reagan administration has made this clear to military leaders.

As significant as the content of the Roh proposals is the climate that gave rise to hem. They were elicited by a massive middle-class vote of no-confidence in the Chun regime and its plan for retaining power through stacked elections. The regime itself pushed politics into the streets when it broke off talks with the opposition on constitutional changes. Then, protesting students were joined by their parents, by workers and by the middle class.

"People are the masters of the country, and the people's will must come before everything else," Mr. Roh recognized in his dramatic and conciliatory speech on Monday. South Korea is at the threshold of a remarkable political achievement: passage, in little more than a generation, from backwardness and authoritarianism to prosperity and democratic rule. Whowould now obstruct that course would have much to answer for.

— THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A Stunning Turn

Koreans appear stunned by the turn taken by Roh Tae Woo on Monday. He is the fellow former general and, everyone thought, the rubber stamp of President Chun Doo Hwan whose nomination by the ruling party to succeed Mr. Chun produced the wave of great demonstrations that be-gan on June 10. But suddenly Mr. Rob separated himself from his ostensible boss and mentor, offering to meet all of the opposition's major demands and stating that he would step down as both party chairman and presidential nominee if Mr. Chun did not accept his proposals.

In principle, anyway, Mr. Roh has cleared the way for an expeditious approach to democracy in a fast-modernizing, healthy and prosperous Third World country that was being increasingly poorly served by the military autocracy imposed by the Chun government and its predecessor for the better part of two decades. The key issue had become the manner of presidential elections. The generals used an indirect system to retain power, while the opposition, more confident of its popular appeal, favored direct elections
—the kind South Korea enjoyed until 1971.

That is what Mr. Roh has now agreed to. He also proposes not merely to end the house arrest of dissident Kim Dae Jung but to restore his political rights and relax the political scene in other substantive ways.

Mr. Roh's course seems calculated to detach the broad democratic opposition from radical hard-to-conciliate students. To the extent that it succeeds, it may sharpen anxicties in some military quarters. The generals, after all, though they have offended the political sensibilities of many South Koreans, emjoy their respect for holding Communist North Korea at bay. As for the opposition, it will be on notice to show that it can compose its considerable differences and put forward a sensible program in the new conditions evidently taking shape now.

Just a few days ago the Reagan administration appeared to have a potential disaster on its hands. Now it is a potential success. The difference springs from luck, which can still go either way, but also from a conscious effort to keep pace with the broad democratic passions that the students unleashed. President Reagan has been saying that there is a democratic current loose in the world, and

The Poles have been in the United States since before July 1984, after fleeing martial law in their homeland. They are like citizens of a dozen other countries who have been granted what is called extended voluntary departure. But the same administration that now says yes to Poles seeking safe haven continues to say no to Salvadorans who fear returning to turnoil in their country.

write safe haven status formally into law. The United States has opened its arms to refugees who satisfactorily prove a "wellfounded fear of persecution" back home. But for visitors who need a port in a sudden storm like civil strife or natural disaster in their homeland, U.S. law can be casual and inadequate. Many countries have formal procedures for granting temporary refuge, but in America the decision is left to the discretion of the attorney general. I inder that discretion, the administration recently refused a request from the president of El Salvador for "extended voluntary departure" for half a million Salvadorans living illegally in the United States.

The double standard of extending temporary refuge for Poles but denying it to

Which foreigners should be allowed safe Salvadorans could be justified in this case. create an economic crisis. Nevertheless, a case could be made that if forced to return home, many Salvadorans would face the chaos and danger of continuing civil strife.

The way to ensure that judgments to grant safe haven are not skewed by politics is to incorporate humanitarian criteria into law. That is an approach favored by Representative Romano Mazzoli. He has pro-posed formalizing safe haven status under existing immigration law. The idea is to gency protection to a national group whose homeland is racked by armed civil conflict, environmental disaster or other "extraordinary and temporary conditions."

The attorney general's decision would take into account "immigration, humanitarian and international concerns," with at least an annual review of homeland conditions to determine whether to extend refuge.

Setting down formal standards for any national group seeking temporary safe haver would eliminate the need for special legisla-tion to address the plight of individual groups like Salvadorans and Nicaraguans that have failed to win administration sympathy. The Mazzoli approach offers a sound way finally to get from here to there.

Reform of the Soviet Economy

The meeting of the central committee of the Soviet Communist Party just finished in Moscow marks a crucial shift from piecemeal economic change to radical reform of the entire Soviet economic system.

Mikhail Gorbachev's name has always been vaguely associated with reform since he came to power, and this tends to blur the significance of the turn made last week in the way the Soviet Union runs its economy. In fact, political change, notably in the form of greater freedom of expression, has far outpaced economic reforms over the past two years. The system of directing the whole economy from Moscow continued much as it has done since it was set up by Stalin between 1929 and 1932. It is this which Mr. Gorbachev now plans to transform by limiting the power of the central economic organs to overall policy, giving enterprises independence and ultimately allowing wholesale trade to determine the balance between supply and demand.

There will obviously be resistance by central economic administrators in Moscow to changes which so reduce their authority, but there is not much they can do about it. In contrast to China, political change in the Soviet Union has preceded economic reform, and this makes it much more difficult for political conservatives to attack the measures introduced by Mr. Gorbachev.

- The Financial Times (London).

Oddly, the economic modifications that Americans tend to focus on as beliwethers of Soviet change are probably the least important of the changes going on. Mik-hail Gorbachev knows that in Eastern and Central Europe, especially in post-1956 Hungary, ordinary people took the bribe of expanded personal economic choice to forget their dreams of political liberty. A Hungarianization of the Soviet economy could probably be managed with very slight risk to the one-party state - or to its repressive apparatus.

Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell's surprise resignation has opened the way for Mr. Reagan to reshape the long-term direction of the high court. The Democratic Congress has passed a budget that invites Mr. Reagan to mount his white horse and go into battle against his favorite targets, the tax-raisers. And Mikhail Gorbachev has launched a huge domestic economic gamble that increases the odds for an interim nuclear arms control agreement and reduces the risk of So-iet foreign military adventures. Clearly, Mr. Reagan's standing has been badly damaged by the Iran-contra affair and he remains at risk until Oliver North and John Poindexter have said their pieces. But investigating Democratic senators such as Oklahoma's David Boren say that their constituents are still pulling for Mr. Reagan to finish his term with his head high. And, contrary to the current Washington theories, the instruments of his recovery are visible. The Powell vacancy is sheer bliss for Mr. Reagan. The third appointment of his tenure allows him to replace the "swing man" on a whole series of social-issue questions crucial to the Reagan constituency. Friday, Mr. Reagan is going to reach back to a 1984 idea that was floated by one of his early brain-trusters, Martin Anderson, and unveil an "Economic Bill of Rights." It will include a re-formed budget process, a balanced-budget amendment and line-item veto budget amendment and ime-nem vero authority for the president. Reagan Has Become the Irrelevant Man

HE Reagan administration created a tangled, undisciplined, lying subgovernment, financed by tin-cup diplomacy and staffed by zealots. They are now being called to account. Since the early days of the Iran-contrascandal, the public treatment of Ronald Reagan has altered curiously. Mentions of his memory and age have grown more frequent; his competence is questioned. None of the examinations go far, but Mr. Reagan has become the rrelevant man, written off in Washington. He is no longer credible.

- Patricia Derian, writing in WorldPaper (Boston).

Reagan his one by renewing their call for tax increases, and Republican Party leaders meeting last week in New Orleans were enthusiastically of the view that Mr. Reagan has the winning side of the debate. The vagueness of the Democrats' tax plans allows Republicans to tell every group of voters that they may be the ones who will have to pay. That tactic worked very well for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in reversing a Labor Party surge in the final week of last month's British election campaign, and Republicans believe that Mr. Reagan can make it work in the United States.

As for the Gorbachev opening, the Soviet leader is embarked on a highrisk economic counterrevolution at least as bold as what the Chinese Communists are attempting. At the very least, developments in those two countries allow Mr. Reagan to claim that his market-oriented, individualenterprise ideas are the wave of the nternational future. At best, these developments could usher in a period of peace and international cooperation that would permit Mr. Reagan to crown his presidency with significant arms control and trade agreements. And that is a long way from being a lame-duck president.

the public morality demands it.

These are not abstruse issues like a return to the gold standard, but exam-ples of how ideology affects everyday life. Supreme Court appointments are a clear way to implement and main-tain an ideology. In fact, Supreme Court appointments are the only way a politically exhausted Reagan adminstration, rebuffed at the polls in 1986, could implement and perpetuate its ideology. It could seize the future at the very time it is losing the present. There is ample precedent for the Senate to reject a Supreme Court nominee on ideological grounds. One out of every five nominees to the court has been rejected by the Senate.

If Mr. Reagan chooses an independent conservative in the Powell mold, the precedent of Senate rejection on the basis of ideology will not be an issue. But if he opts for a movement conservative, as Mr. Meese and others would like, then the Senate has the right to judge the nominee on the basis on which he was chosen; ideology. Almost a year ago, in a speech at the Pacific port of Vladivostok, Mik-

its trade woes with Tokyo and recog-such. Suspicions run deep, and policy makers are used to viewing the Soviet presence in Asia mainly as a military threat. But today, the threat is as much diplomatic as military. The United States should respond to So-

They want membership in Asian-Pacific organizations, and they want to become an official dialogue partner of ASEAN. To oppose all these overtures would afflict U.S. policy with the negativism that used to discredit the Russians. Washington should instead begin planning for the terms under which the Soviet Union can eventually

Unless Mr. Gorbachev is overthrown and the Soviet Union lapses into the self-absorption that has long disadvantaged it in world affairs, the question for the rest of this century and the next will be not whether the Soviet Union becomes an Asian-Pacific power, but when, how, and to the benefit or detriment of whom. As Mr. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, who has been on an Asian-Pacific tour, assess their latest missions, they should be thinking about how and with whom America will share the Pacific stage. The writer heads the Center for South-

Here is one way to put it. As chief of state (the pope has that title also, as Prince Rainier has it in Monaco), let alone as the head of the largest religious denomination in the world, the pope feels obliged to receive other chiefs of state or world ligures. In doing so he needs to guard against creating, de facto, a scale of objectionability. Let us assume a 100-nation world in which Hitler was chief of one state and Mother Teresa of another. Let us suppose that in this world, leaders regressed in moral civility in roughly equal increments, from Mother Teresa's scale of No. 1 to Hitler's of No. 100. The question arises: When ought a chief of state to say, in effect, "I will receive chiefs of state up until Objectionability No. 60, but will go no further??

The trouble with that position is several times obvious. In the first place, as Dr. Johnson observed when asked to compare the achievements of two bad poets, there is no settling the point of precedence between a louse and a fiea. There will always be a lobby, and it may be entirely persuasive, contending that No. 59 is really worse than No. 60.

A second problem is that of declining to see the chief of state, however obnox-tons, who sports a bandolier of nuclear weapons. Chamberlain did not visit Hitler because of any sense of fraternity, but because of the Nazi's military strength.

Now in recent years (as in recent millennia) the popes have received quite scurrilous people. One recalls the shock when Pope John XXIII received the sonin-law of Nikita Khrushchev. Alexei Adzhubei, editor of Izvestia, was objectionable not only on the grounds that he was married to the chief butcher's daughter, but on the grounds that as editor of the principal Soviet daily, one of his duties was to feed the anti-religious fires, which he did with a great passion. Pope John Paul II also received Yasser Arafat, known in the West as the terrorist who prolongs the agony in the Middle East by refusing even to recognize the legitimacy of the state of Israel.

But why pick on the pope? During this same period presidents of the Unit-ed States received Mr. Khrushchev, and Leonid Brezhnev, as well as Romania's Nicolae Ceausescu and Bulgaria's Todor Zhivkov. Not only received them but uttered dismayingly beneficent things about them as, indeed, Richard Nixon had done in China, addressing Mao Zedong and Zhou Enlai - who, in their 70s and presiding actively over the Cul-tural Revolution, were more threatening than a 27-year-old Austrian Nazi.

By what standards is the pope to be judged? By America's own? A month or Jaruzelski of Poland, at the very least the equivalent of Hitler's Pierre Laval. And who else recently received General Jaruzelski, the principal oppressor of his Polish homeland? John Paul.

What astonishes me is the sense of insecurity given out by some members of the American Jewish community, of which the most conspicuous recently has been Professor Arthur Hertzberg of Dartmouth, writing for The New York Times under the headline, "Jews Are Aghast at the Pope's Invitation to Waldheim" (IHT, June 23). Surely the first question to ask is: Is the reception given to Mr. Waldheim a sign of inherent toleration by the bishop of Rome of atrocities committed against the Jewish people? It is so self-evidently not the case that one's instinct ought to be to exclude that possibility out of hand.

The world Jewish community honors its dead by refusing to let the world forget what happened to them. But it does not enhance their martyrdom to insinuate that one more audience by the pope to one more chief of state has the effect of keeping lit the fires of genocide. John Paul received in audience a man who tried to kill him and very nearly did so. That was a pastoral, not a diplomatic, the man who received the chief of state of the Austrian people, and a knowledge of his character ought to leave us, Jews and non-Jews, less than aghast at the episode.

The City Revisited: Beware Of Mickey the Pit Mouse

By Tom Shales

OS ANGELES — This is the city.

Los Angeles, California. But this is you scream and no sound comes out." not the city it used to be.

Hollywood has always been considered cruel town, and been almost proud of it. Hearts were broken here. Now, heads are. It's sad for a longtime visitor to observe a nasty new meanness that seems to have overrum the L.A. sprawl. People don't appear to be going bananas here in the cheerful, endearing ways they once did. The reason so many violent, gory horror movies are made these days may be that Hollywood producers feel they must offer something more terrifying than what is seen on the local evening news. It isn't easy. The past month here

One L.A. story that seemed to dramatize the new ugliness in the air involved a blind woman and her guide dog, both nearly trampled to death by crazed passengers on a Sunset Boulevard bus. The woman was knocked to the floor by a deranged man and, instead of going to her aid, the other passengers stampeded.

The woman managed to crawl to the door of the bus and, once it had stopped, out onto the sidewalk. She was bruised and bleeding, but no one offered assistance. So the woman and dog struggled the 15 blocks to her home. She later told a

Later in the month, KCBS-TV had a grisly coup for its viewers: taped coverage of a pit bull attack. Pit bulls are vicious dogs trained to maim, a charming wrinkle in American violence. A KCBS cameraman was on the scene when a city animal-control officer, a young woman, called on a pit bull owner to investigate a previous attack.

After ranting at the officer, the woman who owned the dog let it loose, and it made straight for the officer, first getting her hands between its jaws, then lunging again at her and puncturing a breast. This was frightening to watch. But it was also a little frightening the way KCBS kept replaying the tape. Then it showed up the next day on the national network's news.

At KCBS, an anchorwoman insisted that the cameraman had tried to pull off the dog. But it would seem difficult to do that while still capturing the whole dreadful encounter on tape. KCBS, like many CBS-owned stations, has lousy news ratings. Maybe this helped.

On the same night's program there was another cheerful item. A man driving on the freeway was tailgating a car he wanted to pass. Increasingly infuriated, he finally got around it and, to express his anger, took out a gun, shot the other driver and killed him. Not much was made of this story, so perhaps this sort of thing isn't all that uncommon. Every city has its horror stories, and

Los Angeles may merely have replaced New York as the most visible violent crime center in the United States. But in New York one can still sense a kind of besieged camaraderie among the populace. In Los Angeles that does not exist It's a giant bumper car game in which the bumper cars now seem to be armed with heat-seeking missiles.

a time when the world desperately seeks Is it discomforting that America gets lation, when a recent poll shows West its fantasy fixes from here? That may not Europeans to believe that Mikhail Gorbe a problem much longer. The city of Los Angeles has grown increasingly inhospitable to the movie industry that put Reagan, and when a rare consensus has it on the map, and production costs have escalated astronomically. More and more productions are being shot in other cities, where conditions and economics are more conducive. Toronto may be, in 10 years, what Hollywood was in its prime.

A strike by the Directors Guild appears all but inevitable this summer, which will shut down production. Actors who do voices for animated cartoons already are striking. An advertisement in a Hollywood trade paper offers jobs at Disney for nonunion actors willing to take them, and in the ad there is a picture of Mickey Mouse, smiling and waving, Imagine, this cute and beloved character propped up to beckon aspiring scabs. Yes, they have managed to turn dear little Mickey into the corporate equivalent of a pit mouse.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Glasnost Is Real, and It's Only a Part of What's Going On Stephen Rosenfeld's "Glasnost: You tions unknown in the Russian ambiance

Have to Read the Footnote" (June 22) is a good illustration of the U.S. press's This is not to s This is not to say that the Soviet Union is becoming a democracy on the American or British models. Nor would this necessarily be desirable or achievable, given the history and culture of the country. But remarkable attempts at positive changes are occurring, "mis-takes" of the past are under discussion and ways for correction are being sought. The results of this fascinating process are unpredictable - there are dark, racist/fascist forces at work also -but I know of no comparable parallel in recent history, and trying to include it all in one word is stupid and shallow. JOSEPH LEWIN.

It was entirely foreseeable that American journalists would try to make capital out of heaping doubt on the useful and hopeful meaning of glasnost. Such seems to be the case with Mr. Rosenfeld.

Perhaps he could apply his mind to seeking links between Soviet and Western ideology so that both sides could move

The report on the UN Food and Agriculture Organization by Paul Lewis, "Campaign to Replace FAO Chief Widens" (June 16), is misleading and contains a number of unfortunate errors.

The Record of the FAO

The United States is far from accusing the director-general of "mismanaging the organization." To the contrary, the U.S. government has often been supportive of Edouard Saouma's prudent management A U.S. official in Rome grams approved by FAO's members from recently told The Associated Press: "We feel the director-general has done a good job in 12 years, particularly with respect to managing the finances of the organization, particularly in respect to reducing the share of personnel costs." This view is shared by an overwhelming num-ber of FAO's 158 member states.

FAO's management is regularly scrutinized by the organization's finance and program committees and governing bodies such as the executive Council and the Conference, with the United States and other Western nations as members. opinion" and others in various connota- confrontation. Something must be They have not detected any "misman-

Neither has the external auditor (currently the comptroller and audi-tor-general of the United Kingdom), maintains his own regular staff at FAO and reports directly to FAO's member governments. Nor has the U.S. General Accounting Office, which has visited FAO several times in recent years, including 1986.

The first time we heard that the United States or other nations considered the director-general as "pursuing anti-West-ern policies" was in Mr. Lewis's story. Such an issue has never arisen because it does not exist. Instead, the policy is to help raise food production in the developing world according to priorities and proall parts of the world. In fact, FAO is often singled out as a neutral forum de-void of ideological confrontations.

It is not true that FAO has "$1 billion in pledges from donor countries for food programs it administers." Mr. Lewis is confusing our organization with the World Food Program.

RICHARD LYDIKER, Director, Information Division. FAO. Rome.

In the year of commemoration of the tance, America's failure to provide funds for the UN Food and Agriculture Organization must be seen as a new low in rendering assistance to those in dire need. The FAO lists the United States as a debtor for millions of dollars of past and current dues. The administration should give less lip service to past events and make a more concrete effort to resolve the serious problems of today. EDWARD J. FREEMAN.

Rogers Was Out of Line

Regarding the report "NATO Chief Sees Political Motivation in White House Drive for Arms Pact" (June 19):

I was astonished to read the comments of General Bernard Rogers, the since-retired NATO commander, who apparently feels it is his duty to sabotage the U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations in spite of the wishes of the alliance's member states.

No doubt General Rogers had made his views known to his superiors in the United States and to the military and civilian leaders of other NATO countries, whose foreign ministers now have formally rejected his advice by endors-Marshall Plan, to which the Reagan administration has attached great imporistled with the traditional process of developed among citizens and leaders in the West in support of this policy. RICHARD J. RUBIN.

What About the Fathers? The report "Marine General Warns of Weakened Morals" (June 27) cites General Paul X. Kelley's belief that American mothers who work and send their children to 'faceless' centers rather than stay home to care for them are weakening the moral fiber of the United States." But almost 100 percent of fathers work today. Why don't a few more of them stay home and look to their children's upbringing?

In another strong week for the return of early plays by our leading dramatists, we have the English Theater of Vienna to thank for a Pinter double-bill which has now come to the Young Vic for a month. In a swift and sure production by Kevin Billington, it consists of "The Lover," written in 1963 for television, and "A Stight Ache," written four years earlier for radio. The logic of linking them together in the theater is perhaps based on the notion that both are concerned with country-house marriages in varying states of disrepair, both are about sexual fantasies and both are about the territorial imperative.

they both work, though admittedly "The Lover" has stood the test of a quarter century rather less well than its partner and has a habit now of sounding more like a Pinter parody than a Pinter play. Set somewhere outside Windsor, it tells at "Every Good Boy Deserves Fareter Ackroyd biography.

The result is a sternly academic and arid evening that might have worked wonderfully on radio but lacks any kind of real dramatic tension across the footlights. Swiss Watchmaker Takes Time to Create a Distinction

EW YORK - Cappiello & Chabrowe Inc. is running a magazine advertising campaign for Rado watches that it says is different from most of high-priced watch advertising. Each ad uses one live model surrounded by a group of plaster cast sculptures to support the headline, "You don't fit the mold. Why should your watch?"

The copy block, short and to the point, notes Rado's two consumer benefits, that it is scratch-proof and that it is the only watch "anatomically curved to the wrist," certainly a blessing to all those folks complaining of

ICC Says No to Rail Merger

Santa Fe Plans Sale of Units

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON - The Interstate Commerce Commission refused on Tuesday to reconsider the proposed merger of the Santa Fe and Southern railroads, forcing the sale of one or both, of the rail lines.

In a 4-1 decision, the commission denied a request from Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp., a holding company set up pending approval, to reconsider its rejection of the

The ICC had held in July 1986 that such a combination would reduce competition in the Western U.S. rail freight market. The two railroads, which merged in December 1983, have 25,000 miles (40,000 kilometers) of track between them.

The holding company said after the ICC made its announcement that it would not appeal the deci-sion and that it would realign the company and sell several subsidiaries. It said it had several options for divesting the two railroads, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Railroad. Kansas City Southern Industries

Inc. said after the ICC's decision that it planned to make a formal cash offer within 60 days to acquire Southern Pacific Railroad. In January, KCSI had offered to purchase railroad and had asked the ICC to block the merger.

Burlington Northern Inc. said it would consider bidding for parts of the rail operations.

Analysts said any sale of the railroads could take a long time if the buyer is another railroad because of necessary government approval. They said the thought a number of major railroads were already lining up as potential buyers for Southern Pacific, which they estimated to be worth $600 million to $800 million.

Other potential bidders included Norfolk Southern Corp. Analysts said they thought Norfolk Southern might be considering Southern Pacific in the hope of forming the only transcontinental rail line. John S. Reed, chairman and

No Flash, but WPP Makes a Splash Ad Chief Sorrell's Quiet Image Belies Firm's Ambition

By Steve Lohr New York Times Service LONDON - The advertising industry is known for its flamboyant personalities, but Martin S. Sorrell is not one of them. "A boring, diminutive, well-fed health nut — that's the image I've been tagged with," Mr. Sorrell said of recent descriptions of him in the London press. Still, the quiet Mr. Sorrell had attracted a following in the international financial community long before his small marketing services concern began an audacious trans-Atlantic bid earlier this month for JWT Group Inc. the world's fourth-largest advertising company and parent of the J. Walter Thompson agency.

Last Friday, after Mr. Sorrell's WPP Group sweetened its offer to $566 million, JWT's board agreed to a takeover by the Brit-ish company, which is tiny com-pared with the Madison Avenue

Mr. Sorrell, 42, is an entrepreneur whose strength is on the financial side. That is the assessment of nearly everyone who has followed his career - first for eight years as the finance director of Saatchi & Saatchi PLC, the world's largest advertising agen-cy, and since 1985 as the chief executive of WPP Group, a former supermarket cart maker that Mr. Sorrell transformed through a rapid series of acquisitions.

WPP's goal 'is to build a major multinational marketingservices group.'

vertising business. The financial side will always come second, but a close second to the professional and creative side of the business," he said. There should be a mutually reinforcing relationship between the two.

According to Mark Henderson, a director at Panmure Gordon & Co., WPP's stockbroker, Mr. Sorrell will focus on cutting staff and capital spending to attain his business plan of lifting JWT's pretax income as a percentage of revenue to 10 percent, the industry average, by 1990 from 4 percent now. "But he does not tamper with the creative side of acquisitions, except to monitor them financially. Mr. Henderson said.

For his part, Mr. Sorrell is reluctant to give away his plans for JWT. But he says his strategy "is to build a major multinational marketing services group." To do that, WPP must offer both "below-the-line" marketing services, such as design and graphics, audio-visual work and sales promotion, and "abovethe-line" advertising. In recent years, corporate clients have been shifting more of their marketing budgets to these more tai-lored nonadvertising areas and away from advertising in maga-

In all, four of the available nine indicators posted increases in May. After manufacturing hours, the largest positive factors were changes in raw materials prices, business delivery times and a rise in plant and equipment orders. Five of the indicators held back the index. The biggest was a drop in building permits, followed by slower growth in the money supply, a rise in unemployment claims, a decline in orders for consumer goods and a drop in stock prices.

The various changes left the index at 189.3 percent of its 1967

Olivetti announces the PCs that respect your right to make your own decisions.

The arrival of the personal computer revolutionised the way businesses were run, bringing speed and efficiency that were previously unthinkable.

That revolution, like all technological revolutions, was producer-led. But the world since the revolution has changed. Business accepted and exploited the new technology. It invested in it, often heavily. The business customer today is literate in the new technology, and is articulate enough clearly to communicate his needs. Olivetti believes that the responsible producer should listen to him.

Systems evolution has been in the role of the PC itself, from a stand-alone machine into part of a system. And this evolution is closely reflected in Olivetti's approach. For Olivetti, PCs are conceived as the building blocks of a system.

This user requirement for a systems approach has demanded increasingly powerful and sophisticated technology. The consumer has, in a sense, retaken the initiative. How should the producer respond?

Olivetti's view is clear. Today's user is not only technologically literate but also financially committed. Naturally, he expects products that will offer him all the benefits of state-of-the-art technology.

But he also has a right to expect products that will leave him free to enter and structure the system as and when he wants to. He needs a high degree of interconnectibility, workstations that offer the best possible price/performance ratio. And he wants to be free to work with the market standard of his own choosing.

This is what Olivetti has set out to give him with its new PC offering.

Power and flexibility

PC range will be three models using the powerful 80386 microchip. These will be the fastest, most powerful PCs available, reflecting the trend for the PC to operate as server in local networks that can in turn be integrated with minicomputer environments.

These new models range from the M 380/T tower model to the M 380 and the compact M 380/C desktop workstations. The M 380 line will be flanked by a series of new PCs available in a wide range of configurations. These will include the M 280, a powerful and extremely fast personal based on the 80286 chip with the potential for multi-tasking, the S 281, another 80286-based workstation specifically designed to operate in LAN environments, and the M 240, a potent workstation that represents a natural evolution of the highly successful (and widely emulated) M 24.

Compatibility commitment

The new models have been developed as an evolution of the existing Olivetti PC range. They are all fully compatible with market standards. (They offer, for example, a free choice of 5.25 and/or 3.5 inch floppy disks.) Indeed, it is Olivetti's firm intention to guarantee full compatibility with current market standards. Whatever they may be. The new models will thus take their place alongside Olivetti's existing PCs (including the recently introduced portable M 15) to offer the customer a complete range of choice in planning his systems.

They offer him full compatibility with his installed base, high computing power, integrated, ergonomically valid configurations and a modular approach that will allow him to expand the system exactly according to his needs.

Complete solution

As well as respecting the customer's existing investment, Olivetti is committed to protecting and supporting it in the future.

The completeness of the new Olivetti
PC range is matched by the completeness of Olivetti's global offer, which embraces the whole spectrum of PC-related products, from software to printers.

In addition, Olivetti's highly qualified dealer network and internal staff are at the disposal of clients to assist in interpreting their needs and to provide full after-sales back up service.

The new Olivetti PC offering has thus been conceived to give the user the maximum freedom of choice.

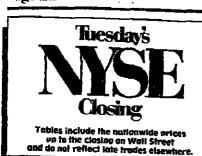

To leave him free to grow and evolve rather than to tie him down.

That is why we see the new Olivetti
PCs as the choice of freedom.

BASF

BASF is a major international chemical company. Its trailblazing scientific and technological achievements, integrated production and intensive marketing have built a significant position for BASF in world markets. In 1985 the world economy was substantially characterized by the drop in oil prices and the declining value of the dollar, Both factors put heavy pressure on chemical product prices. Although BASF sold higher volumes, sales receded for the first time since 1975. In spite of these turbulences BASF had a good year in 1986, in keeping with the standard of the previous years successes.

DAIMLER-BENZ AG

In 1986 Daimler-Benz was able to continue on its successful course of growth. Consolidated sales, of which one-quarter was accounted for by the new divisions AEG, Dornier and MTU, and three-quarters by the traditional automotive sector, rose 25% to over DM 65 billion. Demand for Mercedes cars once again exceeded our production capabilities. In the highly competitive commercial vehicle business.

Daimler-Benz maintained its leading market position as the world's biggest manufacturer of trucks upwards of 6 tonnes. Altogether, the new divisions in the group succeeded in raising sales and amployment. Operational results continued to be encouraging in 1986, above all because of favorable devesopments in the cor sector, and amounted to DM 1,767 million for the group as a whole and DM 1,404 million for Daimler-Benz AG.

Energy ● Aluminium ● Chemicals

The Viag Consolidated Group registered on annual surplus of DM 149 million in 1986 — a record result for the post-war period. The Group's subsidiaries in the energy sector moved forward at an above-average rate, with earnings rising again. Fabrication continued to grow in the aluminium sector, with sales of rolled, extruded, and firrished products increasing. Although earnings were burdened by the fall in the dollar, on the whole they developed satisfactority. Business in rhemicals weakened because of this sector's high share of foreign business and stiffer competition. Nevertheless, profits were sufficient to ensure the payment of an unchanged dividend to VIAG AG. The annuci surplus of VIAG AG grew to DM 107 million, which permits an increased allocation to the reserves of DM 38 million and g rise in the dividend per share from DM 5 to DM 6. For 1987, VIAG profits are projected to remain at the same level as in 1986

The annual general meeting of TOTAL CFP, held on June 26, 1987, with Mr. François-Xavier ORTOLI, in the Chair, approved the accounts for 1986. All the resolutions were adopted. In his address, the Chairman outlined the evolution of the o during 1986 and the first part of 1987, noting that on a consolidated basis, there would be a positive net income for the first half of the current year. As is normal in an uncertain economic climate, the information available at present was not sufficient to permit an assessment of how the year as a whole ould be likely to develop.

ture had enabled it to weather the uncertainties of the oil world in 1986, despite unprecedented stockholding losses brought about by the fall in both the harrel price and the dollar. He added that the Group had demonstrated its resilience to such fluctuations. Mr. ORTOLI observed that the parent company's earnings for 1986 amounted to FF 1.013 billion.

Mr. ORTOLI expressed his conviction that for a long time to come. hydrocarbons would continue to play essential part in meeting world energy requirements, and should continue to be profitable for those about combine efficiency and competitiveness. He referred, in this connection, to the Group's active policy of strengthening its relations with Middle Easten countries and extending and renewing its mining acreage. Furthermore, he laid stress on the considerable efforts being made to rationalize the refining and marketing sector and on the need to restore profits in this area.

Lastly, the Chairman mentioned that the share warrants issued last year would mature at the end of 1987 and be noted the performance of TOTAL CFP shares on the Paris Stock Exchange since the beginning of

• Financial performance: 1986 has seen continued recovery since the Group's result net of stockholding movements increased by FF 3 billion to FF 6.3 billion. Despite substantial stockholding losses (FF 7.5 billion). TCFP's net loss was only

The consolidated financial statements at year-end also showed a cash flow (excluding stockholding movements) of FF 11.6 hillion, compared with FF 9.9 hillion for the previous year. The Group's net capital expenditure amounted to FF 7.7 hillion, the greater part of which were in the upstream soctor.

Lastly, the capital increases by both the parent company and some of its subsidiaries, provided the Group with a net injection of funds totalling FF 3.1 hillion.

Activities:

The year witnessed:

— a strengthening of the Group's international trading position in both oil and gas:

- a highly selective exploration programme, complemented by the acquisition of proven reserves in North America;

- continued efforts to restructure and modernize refining and marketing in Europe, and more particularly the TOTAL FRANCE network.

ing evaluated by Salomon Brothers Inc., the investment bankers advising the pilots, the union would par-ticipate in an offer for the holding company with a group of partners, the sources said Monday. If the group was successful, each partner would get various pieces of Allegis, including Hertz, Westin

Hotels and Hilton International and the union would take control of the airline. Allegis itself, having been pressured by earlier efforts by the union to buy the airline, is mov ing to sell its non-airline assets.

The union, which represents 7,000 pilots, has been seeking to gain control of the airline since April, and its efforts partly led to the corporate shake-up that Allegis announced last week, which nonetheless rebuffed the union's bid.

But all those deals were small and friendly. Accordingly, Mr. Sorrell had the luxury of structuring those acquisitions - as he did also at Saatchi & Saatchi -- as "earnout" deals. An earn-out acquisition is a purchase with a down payment, the world, by engineering the ac-quisition strategy and applying and potentially hefty bonuses linked to profit performance over three to four years. The vital objective is to retain and motivate key

However, at JWT the top management holds less than 2 percent of the company's stock, a percentage that Mr. Sorrell wants to increase sharply, probably with stock options. But this small holding rules out the use of the earn-out trated on small, private nonadver- formula for maintaining stability in tising firms. They were typically the crucial post-acquisition period.

DREAMERS, CHARLATANS and the year 1903 and no one has yet invented a machine capable of powered, sustained and controlled flight. Everywhere enthusiasts toil to perfect one. Their efforts are closely watched by the army general staffs of the great powers. Then, an incredible event. A pair of obscure bicycle makers from Dayton, Ohio, build such a machine and hardly anyone pays of the Wright brothers' climb to fame reads almost like a novel. The characters crowding its pages seem to step out of Mark Twain. International arms merchants, mountebanks, patent lawyers and bankers rub shoulders with daredevil young pilots, Midwestern hicks, Out-er Banks fishermen and obsessed inventors. A venerable scientific body, the Smithsonian-Institution, engages in a cover-up. Another in-ventor. Glean Cartiss, the gifted designer of seaplanes, emerges as a rival, and the resulting fend leaves "a sordid trail of hatred, invective, and lies that middy the pages of aeronantical history to this day." Above these squabbles and personalities, the three Wright Flyers, as the first machines built from 1903 to 1905 were called, flutter across the skies into the future. It is as dramatic a story as exists in the history of science and technology, and Howard spares no detail to make the telling good. To start with, he's especially good at explaining the physics of flight.

Besides relating the story of an amazing invention, contrived by a pair of highly intelligent, mostly self-educated researchers. Howard lifts the wall of time and faithfully presents a culture in which airplanes were unknown Today, cameras would instantaneously record the Wrights' daring flights in sensational detail. Back then, the brothers were largely ignored, which served their purposes fine. Even some people who had heard of them thought they were aerial acrobats.

Fred Howard's brilliant and exciting history

The big issue in Wright scholarship is how much the brothers owed to others. Howard's account is partisan but fair, and while acknowledging their debts, he conclusively establishes the Wrights' originality and genius. By scrupulous sifting of the historical evidence, Howard leaves no doubt as to the Wrights primacy. No previous biographer has explored these matters in such detail; this is the defini-

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

ONE of the quiet, if lonely, pleasures of bridge is the discrediting of the analysis provided by some expert, in a book, for example, or a newspapaer column. In the diagramed deal the question con-cerned the fate of a six-spade contract after the lead of the ace of hearts. Would you choose to play or defend? The bidding usually bean with a weak two-bid in hearts by was led. The official analysis sheet predicted that the result would be down one, reasoning that South could not avoid the loss of two diamond tricks barring a defensive error. But Alan Miller, one of the manag-ers of the Beverly Club in Manhattan has demonstrated that South can succeed by force. He ruffs in his hand and crosses to dummy twice with trumps to ruff two more hearts. The position is then

The spade ace draws the last trump and puts pressure on West. If he throws a diamond, that suit effectively, so West must give up his renaming heart. Now South plays clubs, ruffing the fourth round in the

But Connors, who won the first of his two Wimbledon titles in 1974 when Pennfors was 10 years old (and who at 34 calls himself the numament's "ol' dog"), supplied the real excitement as he stayed on the road back from a first-round loss here a year ago.

After Perafors moved aggressively to the verge of victory, Connors began charging the net and started reaking Penufors's serves with pre-cen strokes from the baseline and sharpily angled volleys.

Perafors was moving slower by the point, and Connors was increasingly in the right spot at the right time. In the fifth set, he broke twice for a 4-1 lead; Pernfors broke back for 4-2, but Connors broke a third time on a Perufors error. On . his final service game, Connors

Paradise Found: 2 Englishmen in Monaco

LONDON - The Hateleys and the Hoddles moved to paradise last week

Monaco, having courted and won English soccer internationals Mark Hateley and Glenn Hoddle with a tax-free £1 million ($1.6 million) apiece over three years, settled in the families and got the lads down to work.

After ushering the departing Danes Soren
Lerby and Soren Busk out of Monte Carlo, the Englishmen were given keys to deluxe rent-free apartments overlooking the harbor, blank checks to furnish them, a choice of French and American schools for the children and Roris Becker for a neighbor.

It's a hard life for the famous. The "H Bombs," as Monaco has affectionately (I think) dubbed Hateley and Hoddle, were whisked to work almost before they could raise a crystal glass to Prince Rainier.

And whisked in style - chanffeured to the heliport, flown by private jet to a five-star Swiss Alpine retreat to rub shoulders with new teammates during 10 days of altitude training.

Hoddle was wide eyed. "All this millionaire many is a longe change from catching the Tottenham team but to training." he marmured.

They are sharp, strong and skillful. We're onto a winner."

Oh happy days. Hateley already knows he was right to opt for Monaco out of the dozen or so clabs that he says wanted him. A.C. Milan let him go, concluding that he lacks the subtleties of a true European center-forward.

Such gifts do not necessarily translate into of Paris St.-Germain. PSG insists that Hoddle, his agent Denis Roach, and former his club, Tottenham Hotspur, played less than fair in ditching it for Monaco.

"We'd like to know what happened," says Gerard Houllier, PSG's manager. "We were going to meetings that were canceled one after the other."

Comments Prançois Borelli, the Paris club president: "They often talk of British elegance and fair play, but Glenn Hoddle has not behaved like a gentleman."

Hoddle, a born-again Christian, says his concience is clear. "I never said I was going to sign [with PSG]," he insists. "I was just histening to everyone's proposals. Paris was too slow. We were negotiating with them for two months with-out an agreement. Monaco took two minutes." Back in Paris, Borelli fumes. "Nearly all

They all pointed to the absences of Greg LeMond, last year's winner, and Bernard Hinault, second last year after five victories in the tour. LeMond is out because of gunshot wounds sustained in a hunting accident; Hinault has retired. So there is no boss in this year's race by setting its pace. "Before, you just had to keep your eye on Hinault and LeMond," Roche said. "Now we're going to have to watch everybody."

> His personal short list comprised Kelly, another Irishman; Fignon, a Frenchman; Luis Herrera, a Colombian, and Robert Millar, a Scot "Plus," Roche added, "myself."

A strong case can be made for — or against — any on his list:

• Kelly, 31, who rides for the Kas team based in Spain, comes into the tour rested for the first time in memory because an infection put him out of action for pack, no Hinault to control the three weeks in May. But, limited by his climbing ability in the highest mountains, he has never been a serious contender for victory in his previous eight tours.

• Fignon, 26, who rides for the won the Tour de France in 1983 and 1984. An operation for tendimitis in his left heel kept him out of the 1985 race, and he has not regained his overpowering form.

 Herrera, 26, who rides for the Café de Colombia team, won the Vuelta tour of Spain in May and is ranked as the sport's best from the start. Millar, 28, who rides for the Panasonic team based in the Netherlands, is a solid climber with a much stronger team than Herrera's. He's a weak timetrialer, however, and has never won a major stage race, so might be expected to show the mental strain of being a leader. In addition, there is scattered support for such riders as Andy Hampsten, 25, an American with 7-Eleven: Claude Criquielion, 30, a Belgian with Hitachi; Charly Motter, 24, a Frenchman with Système U; Jean-François Bernard. 25, a Frenchman with Toshiba; Erich Maechler, 27, a Swiss with Carrera, and Pedro Delgado, 27, a Spaniard with PDM.

Hinault goes even further. "I wonder if we're not going to see a victory by an unknown, or at least a real outsider," he said.

"Anything is possible this year, not only because so many riders have a chance but also because there are so many places to make a decisive move, even before the high mountains."

Now a technical consultant to the tour, Hinault knows the course ahead thoroughly. If he were still racing, he implied, he would not lie low until the Pyrences on July 13.

Like many others, Hinault fa-vors above all the chances of Kelly and Roche, who rank first and second in the computerized standings of the top 500 professional racers . Kelly did well in the spring although he did not make his usual sweep of the classics, or oneday races. Until a groin infection forced him out of the Vuelta three days before the end of the three-week race, he had it won easilly. The weather will play a big role for Roche and Kelly, both of whom dislike intense heat, especially in the mountains. After a month of cold, rainy weather across Europe, the sun has emerged and temperatures have

This suits Fignon, who wilts in the cold and rain. He received a hard knock last weekend when he learned that he had been disqualified in the Grand Prix of Wallonia because amphetamines were found in his urinalysis.

OBSERVER Tom Mix and Fawn Hall

By Russell Baker N EW YORK — The Iran-con-tra hearings recall an age when children's entertainment did not require buckets of gore to keep the Jimmy either. He was adventurous tykes from getting restless.

Listening to accounts of goings but would Jimmy have written a on in Lieutenant Colonel North's poem about Tom? If so, would that office, I find my mind drifting back poem have contained lines like: to those golden days of yesteryear when radio mattered.

and Robert Owen, I find my memory has been singing an old song the knowledge that on this troubled that begins: "Ask your mother in earth there still walk men like Tom the morning to serve you up a Mix, men that have shown bravery steaming plate; it's grand, hot in their youth, wisdom in their whole-wheat cereal, and the cow- adulthood and patriotism throughboys think it's great . . . "

The steaming plate had to be Ralston cereal, sponsor of the Tom Mix show, 15 minutes of radio derring-do every evening at supper time. Tom, America's No. 1 cowboy, was a straight shooter who my, too, because Tom surely would kept law and order on the range have tanned his bottom had Jimmy with the help of his creaky buddy, the Old Wrangler, and two terrific kids named Jane and Jimmy.

See the similarity? I didn't until Fawn Hall and Robert Owen sat down at the witness table. Fawn Hall and Robert Owen were Jane and Jimmy, terrific kid companions to Lieutenant Colonel North's straight-shooting Tom and President Rengan's Old Wrangler.

Soon, though, something about the analogy seemed wrong. It was the Fawn Hall problem that troubled me first. Sure, Jane was loyal to Tom, all right, but suppose Tom had asked her to do something that even she, innocent little girl though she was, knew to be very, very wrong. Would Jane have done it and afterward told the sheriff, Sometimes you have to break the law to make the world safe for straight shooters"?

I couldn't see Jane doing that. What's more, I couldn't see Tom asking her to do it. Tom was the ultimate straight shooter. Asking Jane to destroy evidence would have been asking her not to shoot straight, but to shoot crooked.

In Tom's day Americans didn't put up with that sort of thing on radio, certainly not at supper time. If Tom had tried it, Ralston cereal would have bounced him off the air before he could shred his Orphan Annie decoder containing the Wrangler's secret instructions to corrupt children and shoot crocked if that's what it took to restore law and order on the range.

Robert Owen didn't quite fit as and winsome enough to be Jimmy,

". . . in our darkest hours we hen radio mattered. have three things that help sustain Ever since hearing Fawn Hall us: our faith in God Almighty, the love and support of our families, earth there still walk men like Tom out their life"?

My guess is no. For one thing, a kid capable of getting off clunkers like "Ralston cereal can't be beat" hasn't a wisp of poetic impulse in his soul. And a good thing for Jimmade the blasphemous suggestion that he, Tom, could do as much as God to sustain a lad's spirit.

On reflection, it seemed to me that what we had here was a distorting-mirror version of the Torn Mix show. The characters seemed the same, the childish inanity of the heroics seemed to fit the old plots, but the message had been perverted. Now Tom was idolized by the youth he corrupted and applauded by the Old Wrangler for shooting

It's tempting to sermonize here by saying this shows how far we have descended from good old Tom Mix morality in our zeal to show the rest of the world we are the very model of the modern rathless superstate. I shall resist. Grave though this affair is - I mean, U.S. foreign policy at the mercy of a lieutenant colonel and gangs of arms dealers is not kiddie entertainment, is it now? — the story has so many over-aged juveniles involved in it that upbraiding them for corrupting public life would probably produce nothing but a mixture of incompre-hensible stares, such as we have been getting from the Old Wrangler, and yawns from that part of the audience that thinks Tom corrupting kids is the way the world is,

alonal Revald Tribune PARIS — When a journalist friend found Eglal Fahri in the New Morning one night three years ago, he wondered what a nice lady like her was doing in a place like this. He said hello and excused himself to go and pay. She said he did not have to pay. He said he wanted to listen to the music, "But you don't have to pay," she insisted: "I own the Under Madame Fahri's direction, it has become the most prestigious Parisian jazz club and one of the few in the world where musicians who otherwise eachew them are eager to play. She appears to be presiding over a salon or a family rather than running a club and it is somehow inappropriate to refer to her as anything other than "Madame." She went to a French lycée in

Cairo, where she was born, in the 30s, and graduated from the American university there. She speaks French, English, Arabic, Italian and "a few words of Greek." In 1935, the writer Georges Henein wrote an article about jazz for an Egyptian maga-zine. "My friends and I were interested in cultural affairs," she recalled: "We had been dancing to the music of Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, even Glenn Miller." She emphasized "even" with a jazzman's irony. "He wrote that jazz must not be confused with the dance music called swing, that it was going to be the music of our century, and that it was more creative than classical music because it was constantly being created anew. The article impressed us very much. So then we listened more carefully to Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington."

When the war broke out, she had to drop her plan to study philosophy at the Sorbonne. She became a journalist and wrote articles about industrial unrest, a cholera epidemic and a story about incriminating evidence being unearthed in the ruins of the home of a man who had been accuitted of a theft charge during Pharaonic times.

But she was "living in Cairo with my imagination in Paris," and in 1948 she came here: "It was a fascinating period. Boris Vian was playing trumpet in the caves of Saint-Germain-des-Prés, the Roland Petit Ballet was getting started, Gérard Philipe was in a play and it was Sidney Bechet time in Paris."

She married a Frenchman, had a daughter, divorced, moved back to Cairo. Her friend Berto Fahri's wife, a Swiss, died after giving birth to two boys. They married, returned to Paris, had a child of their own. Madame Fahri wrote articles about social and economic subjects for the United Nations press service. Berto Fahri wrote a controversial article for L'Express about being in a Nasserite

André Mairaux and Bob Dylan and there was a large painting of all of them in the club, which he named the New Morning, after the Dylan song, In 1977 they promoted a blues festival with Taj Mahal, Queen Ida, Richie Havens, Albert Collins and Johnny financial flop but a big success." Opening a Paris branch in 1981, the brothers asked Madame Fahri to be the French director the law required. They said it was merely ceremonial. She took care of press relations until the manager ran off with the till, unpaid bills were discovered, the club was on the brink of bankruptcy and she was legally responsible. She refinanced, started paying debts, became involved in programming. Two years ago, the Archie Shepp is an interesting high dollar made booking American stars very difficult; last year was the terrorist scare. But since tion of jazz to include African and Latin groups, New Morning has begun to break even.

As president of a newly-formed association of French clubs presenting live music, she points out that the French ministry of culture grants her a subsidy, so it follows that jazz must be cultural." Why, then, is the added-value tax 18.6 percent instead of the 7 percent applicable to books and "serious" music? "I used to think business had nothing to do with culture," she said: "I was famous in my family for confusing one and 100. But business is challenging, it requires a lot of imagination. You must find new ideas, learn how to organize and take care of details. I am learning."

Some of her team believe that her privileged background leads her to underestimate the high cost of living, but they all agree when she says: "This is not just a job for us. We love what we're doing. We are all proud of this place. We are a bunch of friends — I'm the oldest so I'm the referee."

The rock star Prince, who has purchased an apartment in Paris, gave two short-notice perfor-mances at the New Morning this year. His driver told Madame Fahri that "Prince likes our place very much. He likes the size (capacity 400], the ambiance and our audiences. They respect him and his privacy. And you know, he's a hig jazz fan. One night he came to listen to Chet Baker.

"Chet's music is so beautiful," she said, confirming Prince's taste: "He's such a melancholy man. I'm very fond of Chet, with all his faults." Though Baker occasionally shows up late or not at all, she re-engages him anyway. "You know, many of my friends do not understand how I can relate to jazz musicians who are, on the surface, so different from me. But I've always been interested in culture, in creative people. Take McCoy Tyner -he is conscious of his value, he wants to be treated with respect, you can talk to him, he's interesting sicians, wonderful artists. And they can become better if they are then, while expanding the defini- treated better."

A physicist who helped invent the Soviet hydrogen bomb, Sakharov, at the age of 32, became the youngest member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences. He later became an outspoken human rights activist and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975. He was sent to Gorky, a city closed to Westerners, after he criticized the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan in Decem-ber 1979. Sakharov is still a men-
